SELASSIE ORDERS ARMIES FORWARD

Acts to Resist Italy's Invaders

Emperor Calls End of Evacuation as Italians Penetrate Further; Thousands of Men Ordered to March; "Time for Real Fighting".

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 8—Emperor Haile Selassie today ordered his Ethiopian armies, which until now had been kept back from the borders, to proceed to the front and meet the invading Italians.

The Negus ordered an end to the evacuation of border territory, which until now had been a main phase of the Ethiopian defense strategy, its object being to draw the Italians well into the Ethiopian lines.

In accordance with his new plan to put up determined resistance to the Italian invaders, the emperor ordered Ras Kassa, commander-in-chief of the Ethiopian northern front, to push northward and meet the Italians with his 75,000 men.

Marks Frontier

It flows north and west. In Ethiopia, where it is called the Takazze, it flows north to the Eritrean border, providing a valley through which the Italians could penetrate far into the country.

On hitting the border, the river flows westward, marking the Eritrean-Ethiopian frontier at this point.

The Ethiopians claim that whatever Ethiopian towns were taken in the north by the Italians were captured without resistance, the Negus having ordered his depending forces to withdraw. Now, he believes, is the time to begin the real fighting.

The policy will be followed on all fronts, although in Ogaden province, to the south, the Italians now must cover some few miles before meeting organized Ethiopian forces.

Thirty-thousand tribesmen were ordered to leave today to reinforce 15,000 guarding the route from Mount Mussa Ali, in northeastern Ethiopia, to the interior.

Thirty-thousand more were headed for this region from Auusa province, not far from the mountain, under the command of Sultan-Mohammed Yagoua.

Arms Sent Out

Ten-thousand rifles and many machine-guns were sent out yesterday to reinforce the army, while today the train for the east carried 150,000 cartridges.

An official Ethiopian communique was issued stating:

"Information from the north front indicates desertions en masse of Eritrean native troops has commenced.

"Fifty armed Eritreans under important leaders arrived in the Makale district with cannon and machine-guns.

"In the region of Agame 200 Eritreans presented themselves to the Ethiopian military authorities"

Some hope was expressed here that Premier Mussolini, now that he is faced with great probability Tabor, east of Lake Tsana, for the now that he has avenged the 1896 Italian defeat at Adowa, might consent to negotiate on a basis acceptable to the emperor.

As a precautionary measure all important documents and books are being removed to safety from government buildings. In fear of air raids, the inhabitants are digging dug-outs from banks of earth along the sides of the streets.

Bulletins From Front

LONDON, Oct. 8 — Ethiopian troops closed in on Adowa from three sectors today and "massacred" Italians occupying the town, according to a Central News dispatch received here today.

Central News said the report was "unconfirmed."

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 8 — While Mussolini's airplanes ravaged the front—although they have not yet struck Addis Ababa—120 refugees, including a score of Americans, raced death to the border today in a new train which, travelling day and night is expected to reach Djibouti in 23 hours.

LONDON, Oct. 8—Information has reached the Italian command that two strong columns of Abyssinian troops, each consisting of ten thousand men, are on the march with the object of wresting Adowa from the Italians. One column is commanded by the Ethiopian Crown Prince and the other by Ras Moulougetta, the war minister.

PERKINS SEES CRISIS ENDED

Labor Secretary Tells Delegates Industries Forging to Front

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 8—American industry finally has made a definite turn around that corner to recovery, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins reported to the American federation of Labor here today in a speech jammed with highly comforting government statistics proving the upturn.

The durable-goods industries.—she said are forging to the front.

"The latest reports to the United States department of labor," declared the lady secretary, "on construction activity, steel production, automobiles, machinery and machine tools, in particular, leaves no doubt that these industries, which are so significant in the entire picture of any recovery, have actually made the turn."

And with production, payrolls have gone up and employment increased, Miss Perkins said, citing figures in various industries by way of proof.

"There are millions of men and women out of work still, as all of us who are here this afternoon realize, but taking private employment as a whole it is estimated by the department of labor statisticians that more than 4,400,000 workers who were idle in March, 1933, at the low point of the depression have found jobs in private industry. In the same period weekly wage disbursements in the manufacturing industries rose from $75,000,000 to more than $140,000,000 a week.

BRITISH SEEK HELP OF U. S.

Favors Firm Sanctions as Bingham and Hoare Plan to Confer

LONDON, Oct. 8—With an eye to American aid, Great Britain stands in favor of firm sanctions against Italy and is anxious to keep the League of Nations sanctions machinery rolling at its present swift pace.

Government circles were obviously elated over the "victory" of British diplomacy at Geneva — Britain assumed the leading role in whipping league members to the speedy action taken to date—and looked across the Atlantic for American help, which, it is realized here, must largely be passive.

American Ambassador Robert W. Bingham decided to confer with Foreign Minister Sir Samuel Hoare today for a full discussion of the war situation.

If another corn and hog adjustment program is developed it will be of the same general type as the 1935 program. The procedure will be revised, however, to permit the assignment of an equitable corn and hog base to each farm under contract whether or not the farm was covered by a 1935 contract or the signer has previously participated in a corn and hog adjustment program."

LOCAL SUM VOTED

Aid of County, State Asked by Council.

The project is one of the largest local projects listed with the WPA. City council recently passed a bond issue for $10,000 to cover the city's share of the project. The county and state highway department have been asked to give an equal amount.

Meet Requirements

The allotments approved by the president for Ohio totalled $16,000,651. The projects approved meet the requirements on the basis of man-year cost, time of starting and completion, and the adaptability to relief load problems.

DAVEY FAVORS MILK CONTROL

To Ask Legislature for Reenactment of Measure Controlling Industry

COLUMBUS, Oct. 8—Gov. Martin L. Davey, in a special message, today asked the re-enactment of a revised milk control bill to end "the chaotic conditions in the producer's market for milk."

Since the Burk milk marketing bill expired by its own terms, the Governor pointed out dairy farmers in Ohio have been subjected to considerable loss of income.

"Only in Cincinnati and Portsmouth areas have the prices to the producers remained fairly satisfactory, and they may be endangered at any time," the Governor said.

"As against August, 1934, the farmer's loss of income from milk in the same period this year has been 45 per cent, Mr. Davey asserted in his message.

The milk control bill has been prepared and is acceptable to leaders in the legislature, it is understood.

Monday Club Meets At May Home

The Monday club met Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Charles May, S. Court-st. During the business session it was announced that the meeting place for the next session would appear in the paper at a later date.

The program for the evening consisted of two papers, one read by Mrs. G. H. Adkins and the other by Miss Jeanette Reichelderfer.

Mrs. Adkins paper dealt with the "Spanish Inquisition," which was at its height during the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella in the fifteenth century and lasted more or less until 1826 when the last persecution was made. It was evolved in the middle ages as an effective means of coping with the problem of heresy which became a serious menace to the Catholic church in the twelfth century. While history has painted it in black letters of horror, the persecutions in other countries were probably just as horrible.

The story of the Spanish Inquisition is horrible and tragic. Some of its officers were wantonly cruel while some were of the finest character. Some of the prisoners were no doubt justly punished while others died the death of martyrs. It is the pitifulness of the misunderstandings, the cruelties, the sufferings and the heroisms which arise from such spiritual antagonisms that there lies the enduring interest of the history of the Spanish Inquisition.

"Loyola, a Soldier of the Cross" was the subject of Miss Reichelderfer's paper. Ignatius Loyola was the exponent of the most memorable moral movement in the history of modern times—the Counter Reformation of the Roman Catholic church, which was a response to the Reformation in the Protestant church. His youth was spent among the gaieties of the Court. As a young man he was given to the vanities of the world. He loved extravagant dress and his chief delight was martial exercise with a desire to gain honor and a passion for reading romances of chivalry. In his thirtieth year while convalescing from an injury he read "The Life of Christ" and "The Lives of the Saints." So affected was he by these books that he resolved to dedicate his life to religion.

After long years of study in schools and universities he organized a company later known as the "Jesuits." They became the principal supports of the pope for many years.

Questions and Answers

What causes a cake to be sticky and heavy, and to have a cracked crust?

Too much sugar in a cake will cause these symptoms. The best recipes are developed by using proper proportions. Over measuring may cause undesirable results, so use a standard measuring cup.

What causes my oven to sweat? It is an insulated oven and moisture forms in beads and drips from it.

If this moisture collects when the oven is first heated the remedy may be for you to open the oven door just after lighting it, leaving the door open until the air in the oven begins to feel warm. This gives the moisture in the air a chance to dry out. Then on closing the oven door the oven heats with a dried air circulation as the condensation has been eliminated.

When should finger bowls be used? Are they still good form?

The present day finger bowl is a hold over from those days when food was torn apart and eaten with the fingers. Fragments of left-over food, bones and other rejected portions were thrown on the floor by the diner and later picked up by slaves who passed basins of perfumed water in which the diner's hands were washed. Today our finger bowls are usually of crystal and are used at breakfast when grapefruit and oranges are served in the skins or when apples, peaches, pears, grapes or other fruit are handled at the meal. They are likewise used at the end of dinners if there is maid service. Correct service adds much to the enjoyment of a meal for many people.

Will you please give me a recipe for Salmon au Gratin?

1 C. fine bread crumbs
1 Tbsp. butter

Drawn Butter Sauce

2 Tbsp. butter
2 Tbsp. flour
1 C. boiling water
¼ tsp. salt
Cayenne
1 Tbsp. butter

To make the butter sauce, melt 2 Tbsp. butter in a pan; stir in the flour, add the boiling water gradually and stir until the mixture boils. Add the salt, cayenne and another Tbsp. butter.

Add the salt, pepper and lemon juice to the salmon. Then mix the sauce with this. Melt the remaining Tbsp. butter. Add the bread crumbs to this and stir until thoroughly mixed. Put into a greased 1 qt. casserole. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes.

If your mayonnaise is too thick and mild in flavor, just before serving thin it with two tablespoons of lemon juice.

WAR - - - POLITICS - - - DISASTER - - -

but it's the LITTLE THINGS that COUNT . . .

New drapes for the guest room, and Junior's first haircut. A new recipe for peach pie and new pans for baking it. A picnic at the beach, and a new hat for the weekly bridge. Every day events? Of course! But they're the things that make life livable!

What's a war in Ethiopia and another arctic expedition, compared to the thrill of the first glimpse of the family that's moving in next door, and the delivery of a shining new refrigerator? What's a royal wedding, and twelve rooms filled with gifts, when Anne has her fifth birthday tomorrow? They're interesting enough, something to talk about, to wonder at, perhaps, but pretty far away from that most important spot and the people who live there . . . . your own home.

That's where your heart is, and that's where real thrills lie, in the things that concern you and the people who live around you, next door, in the next block, anywhere in town. There's news about them in every issue of The Herald, in "inside page" stories —and in every ad too, for the ads in The Herald are news! There's news about new clothes for the family, and new food for the table, and new furniture for the home. There's news about new entertainment, and new ways to get to it. There's about something new on every page, from the latest dispatch on the front page to the new shoes for Anne on the last . . . all written to you and for you, put up in a neat package and delivered at your door-step every day.

A POWER FOR PEACE

NOT many days ago by without an example of the power of propaganda. It has been brought to a fine art since the days of the World war ,and today almost no end is beyond its highly developed means. It is an art which can, and does, contribute to the diplomatic success of nations, the political success of parties ,the commercial success of business, even the social or personal success of individual.

With so many impressive victories behind it, one wonders what would happen if the full force of organized propaganda was turned toward international pacifism. Suppose that at every turn we were brought face to face with the horrors and the futility and the costliness of war, the wisdom of arbitration, the benefits of peace. Imagine peace advertised to the extent that war was in the last world conflict, or even to the degree of a movie star, or cigarettes or toothpaste in the recent years. Wouldn't we become "peace conscious," as the advertising men say, intolerant of war?

It is the thought, perhaps, behind Secretary Hull's suggestion of a "flaming crusade" for peace in the churches. With due respect, one wonders if the churches reach a fraction of the army who read the newspapers and magazines ,and listen to the radio. We too would advocate a "flaming crusade" for peace, but with the difference that every device known to advertising and publicity men be employed to that end. They haven't failed yet. Why should they here ?

WHERE MEN ARE MEN

ALONG with the rest of the male population we are deeply impressed by the great state of Oklahoma. What a state! The women out there had a desire for the constitutional right to hold office, anything from the governorship down seven brackets. They bullied the legislature all right, and they persuaded it to submit a constitutional amendment. Oklahoma men turned thumbs down on it. They put another nail in the sagging sign which reads "For Men Only." Unterrified at home or abroad, they apparently locked up the feminine members of their families and drove away to the polls, swamping the proposed amendment.

The men of Oklahoma, we fear, are heroes or they are foolhardy. Anyway, they defied femininity—the wives, mothers, maiden aunts, grandmothers and daughters—and asserted their superiority over mere woman. Every other state in the union had given women—beg pardon, the women had taken—the right to hold any and every office. Oklahoma is man's last stand in the United States.

Contract Bridge

HE TOOK THE FINESSE

DO WHATEVER is necessary. If a finesse must be taken, take it. If you see no other way to play the hand, if partner afterward comments upon what might have been done more safely, ask him how he could have known in advance how matters would have turned out. Put the unfair critic in the witness chair, as North did, to convict himself.

Bidding went: North, 1-Spade; South, 3-Spades; North, 4-Hearts, thinking partner had called for Ace showing; South, 4-Spades.

♠ A 8 6 2

The opening lead was the 4 of hearts. West played the 8. Declarer's Ace won the trick. Dummy ruffed a heart. Declarer led the Ace, then a low trump from dummy; the declarer's last heart was ruffed with dummy's last trump. North took account of stock. He had lost no tricks out of the five played to date, but he must lose 2 diamond tricks and at least one club trick. Dummy was in the lead and something must be played. It could do no possible good to lead diamonds. There was only one way in which a club could be finessed, and that was to lead low from dummy and finesse the 10 in his own hand. The 2 of clubs was led. West put on the 3, declarer finessed his 10 and East reluctantly won with the Ace, with declarer's worries all over. Now he could not possibly lose more than 2 diamond tricks, so that game was certain.

East led a heart. He should have led a diamond. North ruffed the heart. The K of clubs was led, followed by declarer's last club. Dummy's Q dropped both missing clubs, leaving the 7 good. Upon the lead of dummy's long club North let go his lowest diamond. A low diamond was led from dummy and declarer's J lost to East's K, giving the defenders their second and last trick, giving North one trick over his contract, which perfect defense would have prevented.

No poorer time could have been chosen for South to ask why North did not force opponents to lead clubs, instead of risking the finesse of the 10 on the first lead of the suit.

There was West asking why his partner had not tried to save a trick, by leading a diamond. Everyone within hearing laughed when North retored: "You dumb egg! You have the floor. Tell these gentlemen how they could have been forced to lead me a club!"

The Romance Racket

by MARIE BLIZARD

READ THIS FIRST:

Fun, parties, pretty clothes and beaux are things unattractive Carol Kennedy had never desired until she looked into the eyes of Dr. Owen Craig, fiance of her cousin, Kathy Prentice. Kathy is marrying Owen for social prestige alone. When Carol, an orphan, comes into a vast fortune, she suddenly decides to leave her old home in Connecticut and seek freedom and happiness in New York. Isobel Bronson, an old school chum, helps Carol to buy proper clothes and takes her to her first cocktail party where she meets Gary Crandall, a playboy. Acting on a whim, he takes her to a beauty shop from which she emerges an attractive girl. Knowing nothing of her wealth, he helps her to meet Manfred Morris, theatrical producer, who gives her a part in a Broadway show. But Carol does not care for the theater. At Isobel's wedding she sees Owen Craig again just as Gary proposes marriage. Kathy calls on Carol to say she is going abroad. And that she came to check up on her men—Owen and Gary.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

"I've come up for that cup of tea."

CHAPTER 20

THE TWO cousins measured each other. Carol could not read what was in Kathy's mind because she couldn't understand Kathy whom she believed to be the luckiest girl in the world. Kathy found Carol a complete enigma, this little ugly duckling who had turned into a beautiful creature, become a successful actress on Broadway, shed an old personality for a new glamor all in the course of so short a time but she meant to find out.

"I know what you're thinking, Carol," Kathy said in a pleasant voice. "You've changed your manner of wearing your clothes and your looks but you are still the same, sweet, little old-fashioned girl underneath." And when Carol didn't answer—"You mustn't take me too seriously when I said I was checking up on my men. That was just a frivolous remark."

Carol must have shown her relief.

"I only meant that I've been hearing from you on all sides. First I hear that Gary is beau-ing you all over town and then Owen tells me you were the loveliest thing at Isobel's wedding. Aren't you thrilled?"

Carol was but she refrained from saying so. She wouldn't even admit it to herself.

"You won't mind a little natural curiosity, will you?" Kathy was in the friendliest mood. "Since we're cousins, you might as well break down and tell me all about it."

"You seem to know all about it, Kathy. Besides there isn't anything to tell you. You were at my birthday party . . . or at least you heard what happened afterward. Then . . . well, I just did as I said I was going to. I haven't been having much fun and I thought it was time I would."

"Naturally," Kathy murmured.

"And . . . well, I just came to New York, ran into Isobel Sloan. Isobel took me to some shops and"—Carol inferred that her complete change had come about through Isobel—"and here I am. It was all a series of lucky happenings. I happened to meet Mr. Morris and he gave me a job. That's all there is to it."

"Oh Carol, really!" Kathy blew her smoke into the air and looked at Carol archly.

"I hate to disappoint you with such a simple story but that's truly all there is to it."

"Darling, I wasn't born yesterday. Why don't you tell Kathy about it?"

"Sorry, that's all there is." Carol's reply was brief.

"It can't be! I know what you've done. Any woman can tell what makeup and clothes will do. And I did hear that you met Morris through Gary. Gary told me but what I'm getting at is, what was the guiding motive for all this?"

"I told you, Kathy. I wanted some fun."

"Okay, if that's the way you feel but personally I have another theory. I think there's a man in the story."

Carol laughed. "Of course, there isn't."

"Well," answered the other, "when a girl suddenly is overcome with the desire to be beautiful, to dress like a Paris model, to lead her own life, she is usually jerked into it by waking up to the fact that she wants to appear beautiful to some man. Incidently, that's not an original idea on my part. Isn't it true?"

"No!" Carol answered in a low voice and she was telling herself as well as her cousin even as she remembered the exact moment at that dinner party when she had wanted to be different.

"Well," Kathy dismissed it, "you'll find one soon. The world is full of them and one man is pretty much like another."

"Kathy, how can you say that?" It came involuntarily from Carol.

"Oh, you mean don't I find Owen unlike the others?" Kathy thought for a moment. "Yes, I do. Unfortunately. I'm terribly fond of him but Owen is . . . well, he isn't as light-hearted as I am. He isn't exciting. I always know exactly what he is going to say and do. I've always had lots of beaux and I suppose that's spoiled me . . ."

"If you really care about him, you'll forget the others when you are married to him," Carol pleaded for Owen.

Kathy sighed. "Yes, I suppose I will. I think I'll have a December wedding. Mother and I are going to London, Paris, and we don't know where else but we want to stay over until October. I'm in no hurry to get married."

"But you do want to, don't you?" Carol wanted her to say she did.

"That's beside the point. Carol, I've got to get married. I'm 23. I've been a debutante for five years and I'm dated. Owen is the best catch in this town and, as I said, I am fond of him. I've been playing around with Gary because he's my sort but Owen refuses to understand. He thinks I shouldn't see any man."

"Have you asked yourself if you really care for Gary?"

"Have I?" Kathy looked heavenward. "I've been all over the thing in my whole mind. It boils down simply to the fact that I find Gary more amusing than any other man I know but Gary isn't the marrying type and besides, suppose I married Gary? . . ."

Carol was thinking of Gary's proposal and said nothing.

". . . what would we live on? He hasn't any income to speak of and work is the last resort for him. I couldn't think of living in . . . well, Carol, I'm spoiled in more than one way. When I'm married I want the things Owen can give me. He has plenty of money, a social position and . . . summing it all up, I'll take Owen and forget Gary."

"Of course, you're right," Carol said, "and Owen adores you. You can tell it just to watch him when he looks at you."

"You're an observant little gal, aren't you?" Kathy reached for her hat and pocketbook. "I've enjoyed seeing you, darling. I'll bring you something pretty from Paris if you'll be nice to Owen while I'm away and keep him from anxious debutantes."

Carol laughed. "But I don't ever expect to run into him, Kathy."

"You will, I'm sure. Ducky place, Carol, I'll come back to see you as soon as I get back. I must fly now. I'm late for Tallulah's cocktail jam. I promised I'd stop in."

That visit did Carol no good. At least she was relieved that Kathy had relegated Gary to his proper place in her life and she did say more than once that she was fond of Owen. That was Kathy's casual way of admitting that she loved him, Carol supposed.

"Want to run out to Montauk for a few days?" Mary invited the next week.

The few days ran into a fortnight. It was gay at Mary's cottage and there were parties without number over the Labor day week-end. Carol met an attractive boy, Wayne Somers, and they swam, fished, sun-bathed, danced, golfed and played bridge. Carol had never fished, golfed or bridged before and she found the lessons fun. She packed more fun in that fortnight than she had ever done before but she came back to town before she felt she would abuse hospitality by staying too long.

She found a letter and the script of Stone's play waiting for her. Rehearsals were to start in a week. Would she read the play and phone Morris? Dreading more of her aloneness, Carol decided she would.

After she had read the script through four or five times, she propped it on the little mantel and paced up and down the room trying to remember the opening lines. The afternoon wore on and dusk filled the room with gray shadows. She did not notice the passing of time until a pre-emptory knock on the brass knocker brought her back.

"Who can that be?" she murmured.

She opened the door.

"I've come for that cup of tea," Owen Craig said smilingly.

THEATRES

A TTHE GRAND

Warner Baxter made persistent attempts, for seven years, to crash the motion picture studios before he finally landed a job inside the gates. He is now co-starred with Ketti Gallian in the latest Fox Film production, "Under the Pampas" at the Grand Theatre.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers are said to shatter all screen musical precedents with the nature and variety of their dances in "Top Hat," the new RKO Radio romantic comedy which features a complete score of lyrics and melodies by Irving Berlin.

Comedy vies with romance in the picture, four of the theatre's leading laugh creators being featured in supporting roles. They are Edward Everett Horton, Helen Broderick, Erik Rhodes and Eric Blore. Mark Sandrich, who guided Astaire and Miss Rogers in "The Gay Divorcee," directed. "Tophat" will be shown for the last time tonight at the Cliftona.

AT THE CIRCLE

Director Charles Lamont considered "safety first" a wise warning when he was preparing to produce "Circumstantial Evidence." This Chesterfield picture, based on an original story by Tom Terris, is a scathing indictment of the current procedure in criminal courts, and Lamont expects that its theme will arouse considerable discussion among criminal lawyers, prosecuting attorneys, and judges. Satisfied that the argument of the story is sound, Lamont wanted to protect his production against any possible attacks upon technical grounds. To insure an authentic representation of court procedure, he engaged Robert Frazer in a dual capacity on the picture. Bob, who is an authority on criminal law, plays the role of the district attorney and, in addition acted as technical advisor for the court-room scenes. "Circumstantial Evidence" will be seen at the Circle Theatre tonight.

GRAB BAG

Who wrote "The Winning of Barbara Worth"?

What is the distinguishing feature of the dum-dum bullet?

What is verdigris?

Correctly Speaking—

"Deal" should be combined with "with", not with "on" or "of", when the intended meaning is "discuss."

Roosevelt for Playing Ball With British To Gain Early Peace

WASHINGTON—Two behind-the-scenes war developments on this side of the Atlantic are considered significant.

One is that the President is still running the State Department, even though on the high seas. A constant flood of radiograms goes back and forth between the State Department and the Houston.

The other is that the President definitely believes in playing ball with the British. The call which Ambassador Straus made at the French Foreign Office last week to suggest, diplomatically, that the United States would like to see close Franco-British cooperation, was done on the explicit instruction of the President.

According to those with whom he conferred before departure, Roosevelt felt that France could tip the scales one way or the other—with the British, for early peace; against the British, for prolonged war.

This was behind his instruction to Straus.

Munitions Control

Homer Bone of Washington is the only Senator who championed the Neutrality Act during the closing days of Congress and then stuck around Washington long enough to see how the State Department was carrying it out.

He found that Munitions Controller Green was keeping a record of all arms and ammunition shipped to either Ethiopia or Italy, and that total shipments to the latter since January 1st were four sporting rifles and $418 of sporting cartridges. There were no shipments to Ethiopia.

Not satisfied with this, the Senator began poking his nose into other diplomatic corners, found that actual Italian munitions purchases averaged about $125,000 weekly.

This included so many mules and horses that the National Guard in the southern states has had to send west for its remounts. It included fifty lathes for the manufacture of shells costing about $50,000 each. It also included brass and copper gadgets which Connecticut plants are turning out in three shifts per day, and which, assembled in Italy, became shells.

The difficulty with the State Department, Senator Bone found, is twofold.

First, its definition of munitions is narrow. It includes only a handful of the obvious munitions of war.

Second, it has no power to compel manufacturers to report their exports.

So far, Italy has been paying for its munitions in cash and short term credits. However, her rapidly-dwindling gold supply soon will be exhausted. After that will come the test of whether the United States will once more run up a huge war sales debt, and be left holding the bag.

Labor Party

The A. F. of L. convention, just opened in Atlantic City, faces what will be a big surprise, even to most of the assembled labor moguls.

For the first time in more than twenty-five years the Federation will be formally confronted with a demand that it form a Labor Party.

Sponsors behind this maneuver are keeping tight-lipped silence, but it is known that they are leaders from the textile needle trades and garment workers unions. The State Federations of New Jersey and Washington also have voted approval of a Labor Party.

The proposed resolution does not condemn the New Deal, but declares that both old parties no longer can command the confidence of Labor. It warns of the growing danger of Fascism and attacks the Liberty League.

Finally, the resolution asserts that Labor can meet its problems only by uniting in an independent party on a national scale, and by nominating candidates for all offices from the presidency on down. Even the backers of the movement concede this cannot be done by 1936. But they look to future elections.

The resolution is certain to precipitate fiery pyrotechnics.

It is a basic tenet of the A. F. of L. not to meddle directly in partisan politics, but to "reward its friends and punish its enemies" in both old parties. Many Federation chiefs, aligned with one or the other of the two established parties, can be depended upon to fight the Labor Party move to the finish.

Poems That Live

SHE WALKS IN BEAUTY

She walks in beauty, like the night
Of cloudless chimes and starry skies;
And all that's best of dark and bright
Meet in her aspect and her eyes:
Thus mellowed to that tender light
Which heaven to gaudy day denies.

One shade the more, one ray the less,
Had half impaired the nameless grace
Which waves in every raven tress
Or softly lightens o'er her face;
Where thoughts serenely sweet express
How pure, how dear their dwelling place.
And on that cheek, and o'er that brow
So soft, so calm, yet eloquent,
The smiles that win ,the tints that glow,
But tell of days in goodness spent,
A mind at peace with all below,
A heart whose love is innocent!

Cooking Renders Foods More Tasty, Digestible

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I NEVER SAW but one nudist colony in my life; that was at the San Diego fair, and it wasn't a hundred per center—in fact, the California beaches showed more really conscientious striving for nudism than the colony itself. So I do not know much about nudism and whether it includes eating raw foods or not. It seemed to me I saw a corner of a stove in one of the buildings of the San Diego colony and an icebox, but I may have been mistaken. If these articles of furniture were there the nudists are not complete naturetherapists, because the latter believe that walking barefoot in the dew, lying in cold streams naked, exposing oneself ditto to the sun's rays, eating hay, grain, oats and other uncooked foods will cure about anything.

Dr. Clendening

Most of us, however, prefer our food cooked. Cooking does two things to food:

The first is esthetic, it develops new flavors and improves its appearance.

The second is hygienic—sterilizes it to some extent, makes it easier to keep longer.

Increase Digestibility

Cooking undoubtedly increases the digestibility of vegetables. It probably also does that of meats by loosening the fibers.

The effect of cooking on the vegetables and fruits is mainly on the starches. Dry heat converts starch into a soluble form, ultimately to dextrin. The most familiar example of such a change is the crust of bread or toast. Both are more digestible than plain bread.

Moist heat causes starch grains to swell, and, if continued, to rupture their envelopes. The starch is then said to be gelatinized.

The gelatinization point of potatoes is a temperature of 149 degrees Fahrenheit, of wheat 176 degrees Fahrenheit and of oats 185 degrees.

The principal effect of cooking on protein food is coagulation. The most familiar instance of this is the change that occurs to the white of egg when cooked. The change is an improvement from the standpoint of nutrition because as has often been proved, raw white of egg is the most difficult thing in the world to digest, while cooked egg white is easily digested. Boiled milk is much easier digested than raw milk.

Fats are not changed chemically by cooking. The only exception is that at very high temperatures they may be partially decomposed into fatty acids.

The only bad thing cooking does to food from the standpoint of nutrition is that it destroys some of the vitamins.

FANS THRONG STREETS FOR CELEBRATION

Goslin Saved from Crowd By Leaping Into Dugout; Post Mortems in Order

DETROIT, Oct. 8—Long since, the last automobile horn has shrilled its blast to make the night hideous, both batteries and human beings having run down simultaneously and in something approximating a tie. The last paper ribbon has fluttered down from a window to clutter the streets and settle upon unheeding hat brims. The town is quiet. Strangely, unnaturally quiet. So was Paris after the Armistice and Eden after the storm.

So is Detroit today after the wildest, maddest celebration a world's championship victory has yet known. From the moment that Leon "Goose" Goslin hit his ninth inning single to right center yesterday to score Mickey Cochrane with the run that gave the Detroit Tigers the title, the town seemingly has been beyond all human aid. As soon as Cochrane crossed the plate, with the Tigers winning the sixth and deciding game of the world series from the Chicago Cubs, 4 to 3, the effect was instantaneous, vociferous and lasting.

High Into Air

In effect, this most impulsive and ingenuous town uttered a piercing shriek, leaped high in the air—and forgot to come down.

Cochrane did a gaelic reel from the plate to the dugout. Goslin was mobbed by his own players. The crowd, better than 48,000, was only a few strides behind but too late. Frustrated by the alert gendarmerie on the steps of the dugout just as it was about to lay violent hands upon his person and, with stray pieces of uniform in their hands, speedily indicated that they were about to do him honor.

Ten thousand deep, they stopped at the edge of the concrete only because they could go no further and there like a pack of hounds baying at the moon, they stood and brayed in unison:

'We want Goose! We want Goose!"

Ultimately, they got Goose at the side entrance where he was trying to escape and literally carried him down the street in triumph. They were never to forget this day nor was Goose ever likely to forget them. But Goslin, squire of Colonial Acres at Salem, N. J., merely had touched off the spark of this conflagration. The finish came down town last night when 500,000 people glutted the sidewalks to such purpose that no one was permitted to enter or leave the Book-Cadillac hotel for some hours.

But as long as a town that goes so completely mad as Detroit over its baseball can remember this year's series, post mortems will be written. Why didn't Manager Grimm send in a pinch hitter for Jurges, if not for French? Why wasn't Goslin passed to set the stage for a double play? Clifton had fanned. A million other whys? A million explanations, a million second guesses. And, yes, why didn't the Cubs know how to make a run down play when they trapped a man off the bag? Twice in two games they missed an out via that route; experience was not a teacher, apparently.

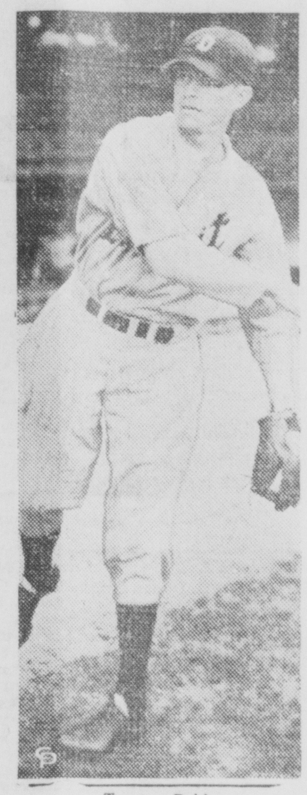
Goose Goslin

Bill Herman



Tommy Bridges

MICKEY COCHRANE FOR TOWN MAYOR, HURLER, SENATOR

Either Could Have Any Position And So Could Goslin; Detroit Is Crazy.

DETROIT, Oct. 8—This town has gone gaga over its first world series winner . . . Only a cold grey dawn cooled off the crowds of deliriously happy men and women which roamed the streets, singing and shouting.

If Mickey Cochrane wants to be Mayor or even Governor he has only to say the word. And if Goose Goslin wants to quit his Salem, N. J. home for a palace out here he can have it for the asking. As for little Tommy Bridges, that lad can rate a senatorship at least.

You see, it was Mickey who scored the winning run, Goslin who drove him home and Tommy whose lion-hearted pitching brought home the bacon.

"Best," Says Landis

Judge Landis told Mickey it was the best world series game he ever saw. Thus making it unanimous.

The Cubs were downcast, the Tigers jubilant in their dressing rooms. Let's listen in on them.

Mickey Cochrane: "It was a great series and I got the biggest thrill of my life when I crossed that plate in the ninth. That Bridges is about 150 pounds of guts. He was off on control until the last two innings but he made something then, believe me. After Hack opened the ninth with a triple, the next three hitters had to look at the greatest pitching I ever saw. I could hardly hold the ball."

Charley Grimm: "It was a corking series. As usual, the breaks decided it. Lady luck wasn't with us. Even so, it took a great team to beat us and I congratulate them."

Goose Goslin: "Boy, did I click on that last one! That was a $50,000 smackeroo. Looks like the old goose will buy himself some more acreage around Salem."

Larry French: "The Goose was falling away when he hit that slow curve. The lucky stiff must have hit it with the end of his nose."

Gabby Hartnett: "Don't worry, kid, you pitched a great game."

Tommy Bridges: "I thought for a while I was going to be the goat of the series when Herman hit that fast one for a home run. I got it in there too good. But I wasn't worried when Hack hit the triple. I felt sure I could get the next three if I turned on enough heat."

The gang: "And boy, how you turned it on!"

Said Umpire George Moriarty: "I'm glad it's over. The boys sure gave me quite a sleigh ride during the series. And the fans blistered my ears."

BUCKEYES PREPARE FOR DRAKE JOUST

COLUMBUS, Oct. 8—Having met one Wildcat, the University of Kentucky, the Ohio State football team started working Monday on plans to meet another invasion from the same family. This time the Cats will come from the west instead of the south.

Next Saturday afternoon the Wildcats from Drake university will appear in the stadium, the last test for the Buckeyes before they start on the conference schedule.

Drake, with a light but exceedingly tricky team, may give the Bucks much more of a battle than is predicted by the experts. Ohio State scouts who have watched the Iowans say that Drake this season is playing a wide open game of football, heaving forward and lateral passes with reckless abandon.

Coach Schmidt plans a hard workout for his team next week in an effort to iron out many rough spots that were obvious in the Kentucky encounter. Schmidt has now seen his squad under fire and plans to start immediately to rectify many errors of commission and omission.

Athletic authorities at Ohio State have decided to make next Saturday Boy Scout day and any Scout in the state will be admitted free to the stadium upon the presentation of his registration card at the North entrance. It is estimated that close to 6,000 youngsters will be present.

GRIMM IS CERTAIN LITTLE DAUGHTER IS ONE OF FAMILY

Mae Gene, hearing Charlie's voice over the radio after the game, telephoned him from St. Louis.

'Hello, honey girl," Grimm told his greatest admirer.

Mae Gene interrupted:

"Don't you cry now daddy."

The strong man who kept his chin up in the club house after the defeat, didn't but his eyes were moist.

"What else did she say?" a reporter asked.

"She told me she didn't like that man Moriarty," Grimm yelled from his cab. "You can tell she's a Grimm alright."

WHAT ARE THEY? JACK SALMON OR COMMON SHINERS

Local fisherman need a fish specialist to get them straightened out.

Last week while fishing near the mouth of Darby, Tom Brannon and Joe Grant caught three fish they called jack salmon.

Clarence Francis, game protector for Franklin and Pickaway-counties, says they are not jack salmon but are a fish commonly known as moon-eyed shiners. Other local fisherman say the fishes in question belong to the wall-eyed pike family.

Anyway, the fish are light in color, round in body and have a fine set of teeth that are tough on minnows.

Old timers say jack Salmon were caught in the Scioto river years ago when nets were used near the State dam. They believe pollution of the river many have taken the fish in to the streams.

Shiners, wall eyes or salmon, or their first cousins, the fish are reported good eating and full of fight.

JOE WILLIAMS MAY START AT HEEKIN'S JOB

COLUMBUS, Oct. 8— Coach Francis Schmidt lost little time in getting his Ohio State football squad back to hard work after the opening game against Kentucky here in which numerous Buck flaws could be noticed.

The Buckeye linemen were given individual instructions while the Ohio backfield men rehearsed signals.

HORSE TRADING INTEREST HIGH

COLUMBUS, Oct. 8— Interest in breeding horses, on the decline in Ohio since 1921, has returned with the advent of new record prices for draft animals, and horse trading deals are the talk of the state in farm circles.

Ohio breeders are selling their stock to breeders in all parts of the United States and Canada. Ralph Humes of Delaware recently sold six head to a breeder in Colorado, and a two-year old Percheron stallion for $3500. William B. Murray of Wellington sold a grand champion at half a dozen shows this summer at a record price, and J. K. Speller & Son of Bloomville sent horses into the south and into Canada recently.

These are just a few of the sales. That interest in horse breeding in Ohio is at a new high pitch is attested by the new horse associations that have sprung up in the last two years, and by the number of community and county colt shows being planned.

In about 20 counties breeders of horses are planning colt shows to be held this month, and within the past two years 25 county draft horse breeders' associations have been organized.

The declining birth rate of the draft horse species has been definitely checked. This year, for the first time in 15 years, it is expected that birth rate of draft horses will exceed the death rate.

Shortage of good work animals has been particularly apparent in Ohio, according to L. P. McCann, extension specialist in animal husbandry for the Ohio State university. A year ago horse dealers spent $2,500,000 for horses brought into the state, and in 1933, when prices were much lower, they spent nearly $2,000,000 for horses from states to the west of Ohio, he says.

It will be at least two years until the birth rate increase may be expected to affect the supply of animals available for use.

Buyers, according to McCann, now want better horses. Two years ago they wanted cheap horses. Good purebred stallions are most in demand. Results of a survey in 22 states disclose that more mongrel and scrub stallions are being used than ever before, owing to the shortage of good purebreds.

WHEAT PLAN AIDS DEALERS, FARMERS

Both the farmer and the business man gain from the wheat adjustment program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The farmer gains because his wheat has more purchasing power and the business man gains because the increased purchasing power of the farmer enables him to buy more of the things he needs.

In the time that the wheat program has been in effect, wheat farmers have been aided through their adjustment payments, but they also are better off as a result of higher prices for the wheat they sell. These improved prices for wheat are important for the farmer, because he can sell all his wheat at this price. His adjustment payments, however, are paid on his farm allotment.

The buying power of wheat in relation to the articles farmers buy indicates how much better off farmers are now than they were in 1932 when the depression was at its worst.

With wheat at a fair exchange value as it was in the pre-war period, 17 bushels of wheat would bring enough money to buy an ordinary suit of clothes. In 1932, the prices of wheat had fallen so low that it took the money from the sale of 46 bushels of wheat to buy a suit of clothes. In the first six months of 1935, the money from the sale of 20 bushels of wheat would buy a suit.

The closer wheat is to a fair exchange value, the more goods the farmer can buy. This in turn means better business both in the cities, where the farmer trades, and in the industrial centers where goods are manufactured.

4-H CLUB NOTE

The Ghost of "Lollypop Bay" will be presented by the Girls' Glee club and the Boys' Glee club of Jackson-twp.

This comic operetta is to be given the latter part of this month or a little later. It is written about two very prim schools, a girls' school and a boys' school. The nearness of the two schools and moonlit Lollypop Bay play important parts in the climax.

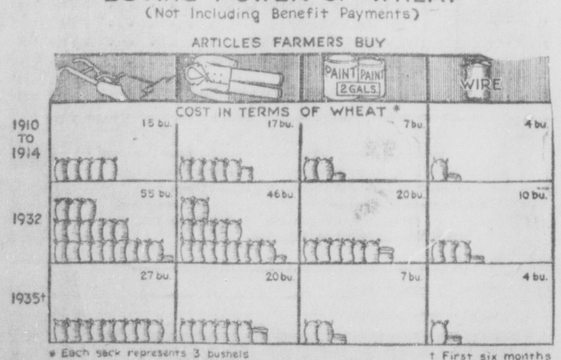
BUYING POWER OF WHEAT

(Not Including Benefit Payments)



THE sacks of wheat show how higher wheat prices are giving farmers more purchasing power, even without counting the adjustment payments. They show that when wheat was at a fair exchange value before the war, 15 bushels would buy a plow. In the depth of the depression in 1932 it took 55 bushels to buy the same plow, but in 1935 a farmer could buy the same plow with the money from 27 bushels of wheat. The sacks of wheat in the other squares show the purchasing power of wheat in terms of a suit of clothes, paint, and barbed wire.

WHEAT SIGN-UP DATE EXTENDED

Because farmers were too busy with corn cutting and seeding to attend signup meetings last week for the new wheat program, the project has been extended to Oct. 26, according to an announcement Tuesday morning by F. K. Blair, county extension agent.

Farmers who desire information on the new program are requested to visit their township chairman or call at the Farm Bureau office.

CLAIM CHILDREN ARE "BOOTLEGGED"

XENIA, Oct. 8—A group of school patrons in the New Burlington section of Spring Valley township school district, denied a transfer of 5,000 acres of school territory to the adjacent Clinton-co school district, has resorted to "bootlegging" of school children, according to complaints reaching H. C. Aultman, Greene-co school superintendent.

Aultman said today he is informed that 22 grade and high school pupils are being transported in a Clinton-co school bus to Kingman high school in the adjoining county, leaving only 14 to be taught in the seventh and eighth grade room at the New Burlington building. The county board of education has the matter under advisement, the transfer having allegedly been made without legal authority and against instructions of the Spring Valley township school board.

FIVE MISSING IN CHICAGO EXPLOSION

CHICAGO, Oct. 8—While rescuers combed the great mass of twisted steel, broken bricks and shattered glass for additional bodies, expert engineers were impressed as a coroner's jury today to investigate one of the worst explosions in Chicago's history.

At least six men were killed, more than 45 injured, and five missing in the terrific blast which made a shambles of the six-story, block-square plant of the Glidden Soya products company.

One of the four injured not expected to live is a 60-year-old woman, Mrs. Sarah Hickey, hit by shattered glass and flying debris in her home a half block away.

Fire Marshall Michael F. Corrigan said he believed an accumulation of gases was responsible for the explosion.

"I think some sort of experimenting was going on in there," he said. "Employes all refuse to say anything."

Ralph Wilson, a company foreman, denied an explosion of chemicals was to blame for the tragedy. "It might have been dust or steam," he said.

The explosion occurred shortly before noon yesterday, and was heard for miles. Windows were shattered blocks away, and innumerable automobiles parked in the vicinity were crushed under twisted girders and bricks.

Still, a furnace is remarkable in one way. It can smoke all the time without coughing its head off.

There aren't any great conversationalists now. Nobody could listen that long without interrupting.

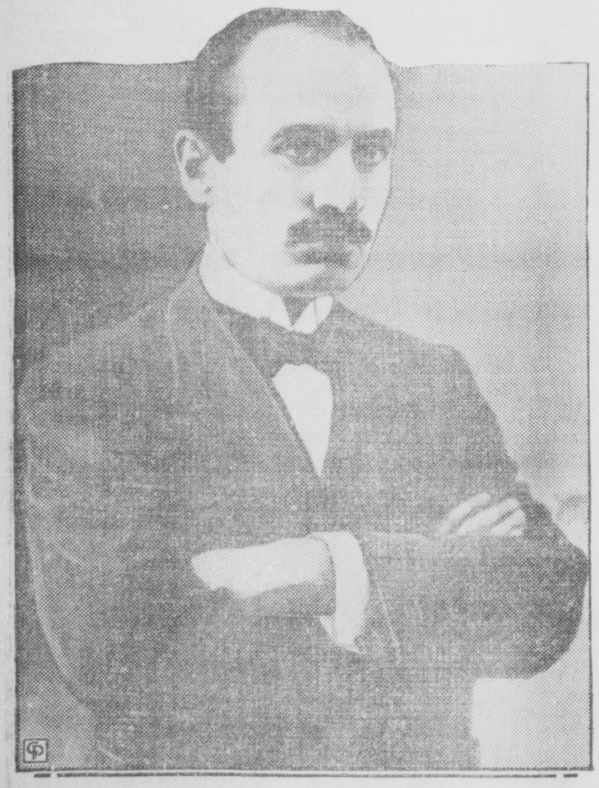
BENITO MUSSOLINI —HIS RISE TO POWER

No. 1



Benito Juarez Mussolini was born in 1883 at Dovia in the province of Forli. When he was 22 years old, he was a teacher at Gualtiere in the district of Reggio Emilia and, as you can see from the above picture taken at that time, already becoming bald. Complaints over his nocturnal relaxations from the schoolroom—card playing, wine drinking and dancing—caused him to lose his post. Mussolini was at the first milestone in his political career. The bootmaker-mayor who discharged him from the classroom called upon young Mussolini for a patriotic address on Garibaldi when the invited speaker failed to show up. His address was a sensation. Note the piercing eyes and the black mustache and the steely expression which later were to become important parts in his make-up.

SELASSIE ORDERS ARMIES FORWARD

Acts to Resist Italy's Invaders

Emperor Calls End of Evacuation as Italians Penetrate Further; Thousands of Men Ordered to March; "Time for Real Fighting".

By H. R. KNICKERBOCKER

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 8—Emperor Haile Selassie today ordered his Ethiopian armies, which until now had been kept back from the borders, to proceed to the front and meet the invading Italians.

The Negus ordered an end to the evacuation of border territory, which until now had been a main phase of the Ethiopian defense strategy, its object being to draw the Italians well into the Ethiopian lines.

In accordance with his new plan to put up determined resistance to the Italian invaders, the emperor ordered Ras Kassa, commander-in-chief of the Ethiopian northern front, to push northward and meet the Italians with his 75,000 men.

Marks Frontier

It flows north and west. In Ethiopia, where it is called the Takazze, it flows north to the Eritrean border, providing a valley through which the Italians could penetrate far into the country.

On hitting the border, the river flows westward, marking the Eritrean-Ethiopian frontier at this point.

The Ethiopians claim that whatever Ethiopian towns were taken in the north by the Italians were captured without resistance, the Negus having ordered his depending forces to withdraw. Now, he believes, is the time to begin the real fighting.

The policy will be followed on all fronts, although in Ogaden province, to the south, the Italians now must cover some few miles before meeting organized Ethiopian forces.

Thirty-thousand tribesmen were ordered to leave today to reinforce 15,000 guarding the route from Mount Mussa Ali, in northeastern Ethiopia, to the interior.

Thirty-thousand more were headed for this region from Auusa province, not far from the mountain, under the command of Sultan-Mohammed Yagoua.

Arms Sent Out

Ten-thousand rifles and many machine-guns were sent out yesterday to reinforce the army, while today the train for the east carried 150,000 cartridges.

An official Ethiopian communique was issued stating:

"Information from the north front indicates desertions en masse of Eritrean native troops has commenced.

"Fifty armed Eritreans under important leaders arrived in the Makale district with cannon and machine-guns.

"In the region of Agame 200 Eritreans presented themselves to the Ethiopian military authorities"

Some hope was expressed here that Premier Mussolini, now that he is faced with great probability Tabor, east of Lake Tsana, for the now that he has avenged the 1896 Italian defeat at Adowa, might consent to negotiate on a basis acceptable to the emperor.

As a precautionary measure all important documents and books are being removed to safety from government buildings. In fear of air raids, the inhabitants are digging dug-outs from banks of earth along the sides of the streets.

Bulletins From Front

LONDON, Oct. 8 — Ethiopian troops closed in on Adowa from three sectors today and "massacred" Italians occupying the town, according to a Central News dispatch received here today.

Central News said the report was "unconfirmed."

ADDIS ABABA, Oct. 8 — While Mussolini's airplanes ravaged the front—although they have not yet struck Addis Ababa—120 refugees, including a score of Americans, raced death to the border today in a new train which, travelling day and night is expected to reach Djibouti in 23 hours.

LONDON, Oct. 8—Information has reached the Italian command that two strong columns of Abyssinian troops, each consisting of ten thousand men, are on the march with the object of wresting Adowa from the Italians. One column is commanded by the Ethiopian Crown Prince and the other by Ras Moulougetta, the war minister.

ADEN, Oct. 8 — Sixty-thousand fully-equipped Yemen soldiers have been distributed along the Yemen coast to guard against possible landings of Italian foodstuffs or men, it was reported here today.

ROME, Oct. 8—Premier Mussolini's radio today flashed news of a crushing "psychological" blow against Abyssinia the capture of the "holy city" of Aksum, 12 miles west of Adowa. Capture of Sheba's ancient capital, where

PERKINS SEES CRISIS ENDED

Labor Secretary Tells Delegates Industries Forging to Front

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Oct. 8—American industry finally has made a definite turn around that corner to recovery, Secretary of Labor Frances Perkins reported to the American federation of Labor here today in a speech jammed with highly comforting government statistics proving the upturn.

The durable-goods industries.—she said are forging to the front.

"The latest reports to the United States department of labor," declared the lady secretary, "on construction activity, steel production, automobiles, machinery and machine tools, in particular, leaves no doubt that these industries, which are so significant in the entire picture of any recovery, have actually made the turn."

And with production, payrolls have gone up and employment increased, Miss Perkins said, citing figures in various industries by way of proof.

"There are millions of men and women out of work still, as all of us who are here this afternoon realize, but taking private employment as a whole it is estimated by the department of labor statisticians that more than 4,400,000 workers who were idle in March, 1933, at the low point of the depression have found jobs in private industry. In the same period weekly wage disbursements in the manufacturing industries rose from $75,000,000 to more than $140,000,000 a week.

BRITISH SEEK HELP OF U. S.

Favors Firm Sanctions as Bingham and Hoare Plan to Confer

LONDON, Oct., 8—With an eye to American aid, Great Britain stands in favor of firm sanctions against Italy and is anxious to keep the League of Nations sanctions machinery rolling at its present swift pace.

Government circles were obviously elated over the "victory" of British diplomacy at Geneva — Britain assumed the leading role in whipping league members to the speedy action taken to date—and looked across the Atlantic for American help, which, it is realized here, must largely be passive.

American Ambassador Robert W. Bingham decided to confer with Foreign Minister Sir Samuel Hoare today for a full discussion of the war situation.

The question on the ballots is "Do you favor a corn-hog adjustment program to follow the 1935 program which expires Nov. 30, 1935?"

If another corn and hog adjustment program is developed it will be of the same general type as the 1935 program. The procedure will be revised, however, to permit the assignment of an equitable corn and hog base to each farm under contract whether or not the farm was covered by a 1935 contract or the signer has previously participated in a corn and hog adjustment program."

The ballot is signed by C. C. Davis, administrator of the Agricultural Adjustment administration.

Allotment Board's Approval Is Now Needed For WPA Project

LOCAL SUM VOTED

Aid of County, State Asked by Council.

The removal of the interurban tracks and reconstruction of Court-st was a step nearer Tuesday following the announcement the project is one in a group approved by President Roosevelt for the WPA program in Ohio.

The amount approved for the project is $80,079 and covers 1.7 miles of street improvement.

The allotments approved by the president for Ohio totalled $16,000,651. The projects approved meet the requirements on the basis of man-year cost, time of starting and completion, and the adaptability to relief load problems.

DAVEY FAVORS MILK CONTROL

To Ask Legislature for Re-enactment of Measure Controlling Industry

COLUMBUS, Oct. 8—Gov. Martin L. Davey, in a special message, today asked the re-enactment of a revised milk control bill to end "the chaotic conditions in the producer's market for milk."

Since the Burk milk marketing bill expired by its own terms, the Governor pointed out dairy farmers in Ohio have been subjected to considerable loss of income.

"Only in Cincinnati and Portsmouth areas have the prices to the producers remained fairly satisfactory, and they may be endangered at any time," the Governor said.

"As against August, 1934, the farmer's loss of income from milk in the same period this year has been 45 per cent. Mr. Davey asserted in his message.

The milk control bill has been prepared and is acceptable to leaders in the legislature, it is understood.

Monday Club Meets At May Home

The Monday club met Monday evening at the home of Mrs. Charles May, S. Court-st. During the business session it was announced that the meeting place for the next session would appear in the paper at a later date.

The program for the evening consisted of two papers, one read by Mrs. G. H. Adkins and the other by Miss Jeanette Reichelderfer.

Mrs. Adkins paper dealt with the "Spanish Inquisition," which was at its height during the reign of Ferdinand and Isabella in the fifteenth century and lasted more or less until 1826 when the last persecution was made. It was evolved in the middle ages as an effective means of coping with the problem of heresy which became a serious menace to the Catholic church in the twelfth century. While history has painted it in black letters of horror, the persecutions in other countries were probably just as horrible.

The story of the Spanish Inquisition is horrible and tragic. Some of its officers were wantonly cruel while some were of the finest character. Some of the prisoners were no doubt justly punished while others died the death of martyrs. It is the pitifulness of the misunderstandings, the cruelties, the sufferings and the heroisms which arise from such spiritual antagonisms that there lies the enduring interest of the history of the Spanish Inquisition.

"Loyola, a Soldier of the Cross" was the subject of Miss Reichelderfer's paper. Ignatius Loyola was the exponent of the most memorable moral movement in the history of modern times—the Counter Reformation of the Roman Catholic church, which was a response to the Reformation in the Protestant church. His youth was spent among the gaieties of the Court. As a young man he was given to the vanities of the world. He loved extravagant dress and his chief delight was martial exercise with a desire to gain honor and a passion for reading romances of chivalry. In his thirtieth year while convalescing from an injury he read "The Life of Christ" and "The Lives of the Saints." So affected was he by these books that he resolved to dedicate his life to religion.

After long years of study in schools and universities he organized a company later known as the "Jesuits." They became the principal supports of the pope for many years.

Questions and Answers

What causes a cake to be sticky and heavy, and to have a cracked crust?

Too much sugar in a cake will cause these symptoms. The best recipes are developed by using proper proportions. Over measuring may cause undesirable results, so use a standard measuring cup.

What causes my oven to sweat? It is an insulated oven and moisture forms in beads and drips from it.

If this moisture collects when the oven is first heated the remedy may be for you to open the oven door just after lighting it, leaving the door open until the air in the oven begins to feel warm. This gives the moisture in the air a chance to dry out. Then on closing the oven door the oven heats with a dried air circulation as the condensation has been eliminated.

When should finger bowls be used? Are they still good form?

The present day finger bowl is a hold over from those days when food was torn apart and eaten with the fingers. Fragments of left-over food, bones and other rejected portions were thrown on the floor by the diner and later picked up by slaves who passed basins of perfumed water in which the diner's hands were washed. Today our finger bowls are usually of crystal and are used at breakfast when grapefruit and oranges are served in the skins or when apples, peaches, pears, grapes or other fruit are handled at the meal. They are likewise used at the end of dinners if there is maid service. Correct service adds much to the enjoyment of a meal for many people.

Will you please give me a recipe for Salmon au Gratin?

Use these ingredients for Salmon au Gratin made with Drawn Butter Sauce:

Salmon au Gratin

1 can salmon
¼ tsp. salt
⅛ tsp. pepper
2 Tbsp. lemon juice
1 C. fine bread crumbs
1 Tbsp. butter

Drawn Butter Sauce

2 Tbsp. butter
2 Tbsp. flour
1 C. boiling water
¼ tsp. salt
Cayenne
1 Tbsp. butter

To make the butter sauce, melt 2 Tbsp. butter in a pan; stir in the flour, add the boiling water gradually and stir until the mixture boils. Add the salt, cayenne and another Tbsp. butter.

Add the salt, pepper and lemon juice to the salmon. Then mix the sauce with this. Melt the remaining Tbsp. butter. Add the bread crumbs to this and stir until thoroughly mixed. Put into a greased 1 qt. casserole. Cover with buttered crumbs and bake at 400 degrees for 20 minutes.

If your mayonnaise is too thick and mild in flavor, just before serving thin it with two tablespoons of lemon juice.

but it's the LITTLE THINGS that COUNT . . .

New drapes for the guest room, and Junior's first haircut. A new recipe for peach pie and new pans for baking it. A picnic at the beach, and a new hat for the weekly bridge. Every day events? Of course! But they're the things that make life livable!

What's a war in Ethiopia and another arctic expedition, compared to the thrill of the first glimpse of the family that's moving in next door, and the delivery of a shining new refrigerator? What's a royal wedding, and twelve rooms filled with gifts, when Anne has her fifth birthday tomorrow? They're interesting enough, something to talk about, to wonder at, perhaps, but pretty far away from that most important spot and the people who live there . . . . your own home.

That's where your heart is, and that's where real thrills lie, in the things that concern you and the people who live around you, next door, in the next block, anywhere in town. There's news about them in every issue of The Herald, in "inside page" stories —and in every ad too, for the ads in The Herald are news! There's news about new clothes for the family, and new food for the table, and new furniture for the home. There's news about new entertainment, and new ways to get to it. There's about something new on every page, from the latest dispatch on the front page to the new shoes for Anne on the last . . . all written to you and for you, put up in a neat package and delivered at your door-step every day.

A POWER FOR PEACE

NOT many days ago by without an example of the power of propaganda. It has been brought to a fine art since the days of the World war ,and today almost no end is beyond its highly developed means. It is an art which can, and does, contribute to the diplomatic success of nations, the political success of parties ,the commercial success of business, even the social or personal success of individual.

With so many impressive victories behind it, one wonders what would happen if the full force of organized propaganda was turned toward international pacifism. Suppose that at every turn we were brought face to face with the horrors and the futility and the costliness of war, the wisdom of arbitration, the benefits of peace. Imagine peace advertised to the extent that war was in the last world conflict, or even to the degree of a movie star, or cigarettes or toothpaste in the recent years. Wouldn't we become "peace conscious," as the advertising men say, intolerant of war?

It is the thought, perhaps, behind Secretary Hull's suggestion of a "flaming crusade" for peace in the churches. With due respect, one wonders if the churches reach a fraction of the army who read the newspapers and magazines ,and listen to the radio. We too would advocate a "flaming crusade" for peace, but with the difference that every device known to advertising and publicity men be employed to that end. They haven't failed yet. Why should they here ?

WHERE MEN ARE MEN

ALONG with the rest of the male population we are deeply impressed by the great state of Oklahoma. What a state! The women out there had a desire for the constitutional right to hold office, anything from the governorship down seven brackets. They bullied the legislature all right, and they persuaded it to submit a constitutional amendment. Oklahoma men turned thumbs down on it. They put another nail in the sagging sign which reads "For Men Only." Unterrified at home or abroad, they apparently locked up the feminine members of their families and drove away to the polls, swamping the proposed amendment.

The men of Oklahoma, we fear, are heroes or they are foolhardy. Anyway, they defied femininity—the wives, mothers, maiden aunts, grandmothers and daughters—and asserted their superiority over mere woman. Every other state in the union had given women—beg pardon, the women had taken—the right to hold any and every office. Oklahoma is man's last stand in the United States.

Contract Bridge

By E. V. SHEPARD.

HE TOOK THE FINESSE

DO WHATEVER is necessary. If a finesse must be taken, take it. If you see no other way to play the hand, if partner afterward comments upon what might have been done more safely, ask him how he could have known in advance how matters would have turned out. Put the unfair critic in the witness chair, as North did, to convict himself.

Bidding went: North, 1-Spade; South, 3-Spades; North, 4-Hearts, thinking partner had called for Ace showing; South, 4-Spades.

	♠ K Q J 10 4 ♥ A 7 3 ♦ J 8 ♣ K 10 8
♠ 9 5 ♥ K 10 8 5 2 ♦ A 10 7 ♣ J 4 3	W. E. S.	♠ 7 3 ♥ Q J 6 4 ♦ K 9 5 3 ♣ A 9 6
	♠ A 8 6 2 ♥ 9 ♦ Q 6 4 2 ♣ Q 7 5 2

The opening lead was the 4 of hearts. West played the 8. Declarer's Ace won the trick. Dummy ruffed a heart. Declarer led the Ace, then a low trump from dummy; the declarer's last heart was ruffed with dummy's last trump. North took account of stock. He had lost no tricks out of the five played to date, but he must lose 2 diamond tricks and at least one club trick. Dummy was in the lead and something must be played. It could do no possible good to lead diamonds. There was only one way in which a club could be finessed, and that was to lead low from dummy and finesse the 10 in his own hand. The 2 of clubs was led. West put on the 3, declarer finessed his 10 and East reluctantly won with the Ace, with declarer's worries all over. Now he could not possibly lose more than 2 diamond tricks, so that game was certain.

East led a heart. He should have led a diamond. North ruffed the heart. The K of clubs was led, followed by declarer's last club. Dummy's Q dropped both East's clubs, leaving the 7 good. Upon the lead of dummy's long club North let go his lowest diamond. A low diamond was led from dummy and declarer's J lost to East's K, giving the defenders their second and last trick, giving North one trick over his contract, which perfect defense would have prevented.

No poorer time could have been chosen for South to ask why North did not force opponents to lead clubs, instead of risking the finesse of the 10 on the first lead of the suit.

There was West asking why his partner had not tried to save a trick, by leading a diamond. Everyone in hearing laughed when North roared: "You dumb egg! You have a floor. Tell these gentlemen how you could have been forced to lead a club!"

The Romance Racket

by MARIE BLIZARD

READ THIS FIRST:

Fun, parties, pretty clothes and beaux are things unattractive Carol Kennedy had never desired until she looked into the eyes of Dr. Owen Craig, fiance of her cousin, Kathy Prentice. Kathy is marrying Owen for social prestige alone. When Carol, an orphan, comes into a vast fortune, she suddenly decides to leave her old home in Connecticut and seek freedom and happiness in New York. Isobel Bronson, an old school chum, helps Carol to buy proper clothes and takes her to her first cocktail party where she meets Gary Crandall, a playboy. Acting on a whim, he takes her to a beauty shop from which she emerges an attractive girl. Knowing nothing of her wealth, he helps her to meet Manfred Morris, theatrical producer, who gives her a part in a Broadway show. But Carol does not care for the theater. At Isobel's wedding she sees Owen Craig again just as Gary proposes marriage. Kathy calls on Carol to say she is going abroad. And that she came to check up on her men—Owen and Gary.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

"I've come up for that cup of tea."

CHAPTER 20

THE TWO cousins measured each other. Carol could not read what was in Kathy's mind because she couldn't understand Kathy whom she believed to be the luckiest girl in the world. Kathy found Carol a complete enigma, this little ugly duckling who had turned into a beautiful creature, become a successful actress on Broadway, shed an old personality for a new glamor all in the course of so short a time but she meant to find out.

"I know what you're thinking, Carol," Kathy said in a pleasant voice. "You've changed your manner of wearing your clothes and your looks but you are still the same, sweet, little old-fashioned girl underneath." And when Carol didn't answer—"You mustn't take me too seriously when I said I was checking up on my men. That was just a frivolous remark."

Carol must have shown her relief. "I only meant that I've been hearing from you on all sides. First I hear that Gary is beau-ing you all over town and then Owen tells me you were the loveliest thing at Isobel's wedding. Aren't you thrilled?"

Carol was but she refrained from saying so. She wouldn't even admit it to herself.

"You won't mind a little natural curiosity, will you?" Kathy was in the friendliest mood. "Since we're cousins, you might as well break down and tell me all about it."

"You seem to know all about it, Kathy. Besides there isn't anything to tell you. You were at my birthday party . . . or at least you heard what happened afterward. Then . . . well, I just did as I said I was going to. I haven't been having much fun and I thought it was time I would."

"Naturally," Kathy murmured.

"And . . . well, I just came to New York, ran into Isobel Sloan. Isobel took me to some shops and"—Carol inferred that her complete change had come about through Isobel—"and here I am. It was all a series of lucky happenings. I happened to meet Mr. Morris and he gave me a job. That's all there is to it."

"Oh Carol, really!" Kathy blew her smoke into the air and looked at Carol archly.

"I hate to disappoint you with such a simple story but that's truly all there is to it."

"Darling, I wasn't born yesterday. Why don't you tell Kathy about it?"

"Sorry, that's all there is." Carol's reply was brief.

"It can't be! I know what you've done. Any woman can tell what makeup and clothes will do. And I did hear that you met Morris through Gary. Gary told me but what I'm getting at is, what was the guiding motive for all this?"

"I told you, Kathy. I wanted some fun."

"Okay, if that's the way you feel but personally I have another theory. I think there's a man in the story."

Carol laughed. "Of course, there isn't."

"Well," answered the other, "when a girl suddenly is overcome with the desire to be beautiful, to dress like a Paris model, to lead her own life, she is usually jerked into it by waking up to the fact that she wants to appear beautiful to some man. Incidentally, that's not an original idea on my part. Isn't it true?"

"No!" Carol answered in a low voice and she was telling herself as well as her cousin even as she remembered the exact moment at that dinner party when she had wanted to be different.

"Well," Kathy dismissed it, "you'll find one soon. The world is full of them and one man is pretty much like another."

"Kathy, how can you say that?" It came involuntarily from Carol.

"Oh, you mean don't I find Owen unlike the others?" Kathy thought for a moment. "Yes, I do. Unfortunately. I'm terribly fond of him but Owen is . . . well, he isn't as light-hearted as I am. He isn't exciting. I always know exactly what he is going to say and do. I've always had lots of beaux and I suppose that's spoiled me . . ."

"If you really care about him, you'll forget the others when you are married to him." Carol pleaded for Owen.

Kathy sighed. "Yes, I suppose I will. I think I'll have a December wedding. Mother and I are going to London, Paris, and we don't know where else but we want to stay over until October. I'm in no hurry to get married."

"But you do want to, don't you?" Carol wanted her to say she did.

"That's beside the point, Carol. I've got to get married. I'm 23. I've been a debutante for five years and I'm dated. Owen is the best catch in this town and, as I said, I am fond of him. I've been playing around with Gary because he's my sort but Owen refuses to understand. He thinks I shouldn't see any man."

"Have you asked yourself if you really care for Gary?"

"Have I?" Kathy looked heavenward. "I've been all over the things in my whole mind. It boils down simply to the fact that I find Gary more amusing than any other man I know but Gary isn't the marrying type and besides, suppose I married Gary? . . ."

Carol was thinking of Gary's proposal and said nothing.

". . . what would we live on? He hasn't any income to speak of as work is the last resort for him. I couldn't think of living in . . . well, Carol, I'm spoiled in more than one way. When I'm married I want the things Owen can give me. He has plenty of money, a social position and . . . summing it all up, I'll take Owen and forget Gary."

"Of course, you're right," Carol said, "and Owen adores you. You can tell it just to watch him when he looks at you."

"You're an observant little gal, aren't you?" Kathy reached for her hat and pocketbook. "I've enjoyed seeing you, darling. I'll bring you something pretty from Paris if you'll be nice to Owen while I'm away and keep him from anxious debutantes."

Carol laughed. "But I don't ever expect to run into him, Kathy."

"You will, I'm sure. Ducky place, Carol. I'll come back to see you as soon as I get back. I must fly now. I'm late for Tallulah's cocktail jam. I guess I'll stop in."

Carol did no good. At last she was relieved that Kathy had returned Gary to his proper place in her life and she did say more than once that she was fond of Owen, that was Kathy's casual way of admitting that she loved him, Carol supposed.

"Want to run out to Montauk for a few days?" Mary invited the next week.

The few days run into a fortnight. It was gay at Mary's cottage and there were parties without number over the Labor day week-end. Carol met an attractive boy, Wayne Sampson. They swam, biked, sun-bathed, danced, golfed and played bridge. Carol had never fished, golfed or bridged before and she found the lessons fun. She packed more fun in that fortnight than she had ever done before but she came back to town before she felt she would abuse hospitality by staying too long.

She found a letter and the script of Stone's play waiting for her. Rehearsals were to start in a week. Would she read the play and phone Morris? Dreading more of her aloneness, Carol decided she would.

After she had read the script through four or five times, she propped it on the little mantel and paced up and down the room trying to remember the opening lines. The afternoon wore on and dusk filled the room with gray shadows. She did not notice the passing of time until a pre-emptory knock on the brass knocker brought her back.

"Who can that be?" she murmured.

She opened the door.

"I've come for that cup of tea," Owen Craig said smilingly.

THEATRES

AT THE GRAND

Warner Baxter made persistent attempts, for seven years, to crash the motion picture studios before he finally landed a job inside the gates. He is now co-starred with Ketti Gallian in the latest Fox Film production, "Under the Pampas" at the Grand Theatre.

AT THE CLIFTONA

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers are said to shatter all screen musical precedents with the nature and variety of their dances in "Top Hat," the new RKO Radio romantic comedy which features a complete score of lyrics and melodies by Irving Berlin.

AT THE CIRCLE

Director Charles Lamont considered "nobody first" a wise warning when he was preparing to produce "Circumstantial Evidence." This Chesterfield picture, based on an original story by Tom Reed, is a scathing indictment of the current procedure in criminal courts, and Lamont expects that its theme will arouse considerable discussion among criminal lawyers, prosecuting attorneys and judges. Satisfied that the development of the story is correct, Lamont wanted to protect it from production against any possible attacks upon technical grounds. To insure an authentic representation of court procedure he engaged Robert Frazer as a legal capacity on the picture. Bob, who is an authority on criminal law, plays the role of the district attorney and, in addition, acted as technical advisor for the court-room scenes. "Circumstantial Evidence" will be seen at the Circle Theatre tonight.

Roosevelt for Playing Ball With British To Gain Early Peace

One is that the President is still running the State Department, even though on the high seas. A constant flood of radiograms goes back and forth between the State Department and the Houston.

The other is that the President definitely believes in playing ball with the British. The call which Ambassador Straus made at the French Foreign Office last week to suggest, diplomatically, that the United States would like to see close Franco-British cooperation, was done on the explicit instruction of the President.

According to those with whom he conferred before departure, Roosevelt felt that France could tip the scales one way or the other—with the British, for early peace; against the British, for prolonged war.

This was behind his instruction to Straus.

Munitions Control

Homer Bone of Washington is the only Senator who championed the Neutrality Act during the closing days of Congress and then stuck around Washington long enough to see how the State Department was carrying it out.

He found that Munitions Controller Green was keeping a record of all arms and ammunition shipped to either Ethiopia or Italy, and that total shipments to the latter since January 1st were four sporting rifles and $418 of sporting cartridges. There were no shipments to Ethiopia.

Not satisfied with this, the Senator began poking his nose into other diplomatic corners, found that actual Italian munitions purchases averaged about $125,000 weekly.

This included so many mules and horses that the National Guard in the southern states has had to send west for its remounts. It included fifty lathes for the manufacture of shells costing about $50,000 each. It also included brass and copper gadgets which Connecticut plants are turning out in three shifts per day, and which, assembled in Italy, became shells.

The difficulty with the State Department, Senator Bone found, is twofold.

First, its definition of munitions is narrow. It includes only a handful of the obvious munitions of war.

Second, it has no power to compel manufacturers to report their exports.

So far, Italy has been paying for its munitions in cash and short term credits. However, her rapidly-dwindling gold supply soon will be exhausted. After that will come the test of whether the United States will once more run up a huge war sales debt, and be left holding the bag.

Labor Party

The A. F. of L. convention, just opened in Atlantic City, faces what will be a big surprise, even to most of the assembled labor moguls.

For the first time in more than twenty-five years the Federation will be formally confronted with a demand that it form a Labor Party.

Sponsors behind this maneuver are keeping tight-lipped silence, but it is known that they are leaders from the textile needle trades and garment workers unions. The State Federations of New Jersey and Washington also have voted approval of a Labor Party.

The proposed resolution does not condemn the New Deal, but declares that both old parties no longer can command the confidence of Labor. It warns of the growing danger of Fascism and attacks the Liberty League.

Finally, the resolution asserts that Labor can meet its problems only by uniting in an independent party on a national scale, and by nominating candidates for all offices from the presidency on down. Even the backers of the movement concede this cannot be done by 1936. But they look to future elections.

The resolution is certain to precipitate fiery pyrotechnics.

It is a basic tenet of the A. F. of L. not to meddle directly in partisan politics, but to "reward its friends and punish its enemies" in both old parties. Many Federation chiefs, aligned with one or the other of the two established parties, can be depended upon to fight the Labor Party move to the finish.

Poems That Live

SHE WALKS IN BEAUTY

She walks in beauty, like the night
Of cloudless chimes and starry skies;
And all that's best of dark and bright
Meet in her aspect and her eyes;
Thus mellowed to that tender light
Which heaven to gaudy day denies.

One shade the more, one ray the less,
Had half impaired the nameless grace
Which waves in every raven tress
Or softly lightens o'er her face;
Where thoughts serenely sweet express
How pure, how dear their dwelling place.
And on that cheek, and o'er that brow
So soft, so calm, yet eloquent,
The smiles that win ,the tints that glow,
But tell of days in goodness spent,
A mind at peace with all below,
A heart whose love is innocent!

Cooking Renders Foods More Tasty, Digestible

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

I NEVER SAW but one nudist colony in my life; that was at the San Diego fair, and it wasn't a hundred per cent—in fact, the California beaches showed more really conscientious striving for nudism than the colony itself. So I do not know much about nudism and whether it includes eating raw foods or not. It seemed to me I saw a corner of a stove in one of the buildings of the San Diego colony and an icebox, but I may have been mistaken. If these articles of furniture were there the nudists are not complete naturetherapists, because the latter believe that walking barefoot in the dew, lying in cold streams naked, exposing oneself ditto to the sun's rays, eating hay, grain, oats and other uncooked foods will cure about anything.

Dr. Clendening

Most of us, however, prefer our food cooked. Cooking does two things to food:

The first is esthetic. It develops new flavors and improves its appearance.

The second is hygienic—sterilizes it to some extent, makes it easier to keep longer.

Increase Digestibility

Cooking undoubtedly increases the digestibility of vegetables. It probably also does that of meats by loosening the fibers.

The effect of cooking on the vegetables and fruits is mainly on the starches. Dry heat converts starch into a soluble form, ultimately to dextrin. The most familiar example of such a change is the crust of bread or toast. Both are more digestible than plain bread.

Moist heat causes starch grains to swell, and, if continued, to rupture their envelopes. The starch is then said to be gelatinized.

The gelatinization point of potatoes is a temperature of 149 degrees Fahrenheit, of wheat 176 degrees Fahrenheit and of oats 185 degrees.

The principal effect of cooking on protein food is coagulation. The most familiar instance of this is the change that occurs to the white of egg when cooked. The change is an improvement from the standpoint of nutrition because as has often been proved, raw white of egg is the most difficult thing in the world to digest, while cooked egg white is easily digested. Boiled milk is much easier digested than raw milk.

Fats are not changed chemically by cooking. The only exception is that at very high temperatures they may be partially decomposed into fatty acids.

The only bad thing cooking does to food from the standpoint of nutrition is that it destroys some of the vitamins.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Six pamphlets by Dr. Clendening can now be obtained by sending 10 cents in coin, for each, and a self-addressed envelope stamped with a three-cent stamp, to Dr. Logan Clendening, in care of this paper. FANS THRONG STREETS FOR CELEBRATION

DETROIT, Oct. 8 -Long since, the last automobile horn has shrilled its blast to make the night hideous, both batteries and human beings having run down simultaneously and in something approximating a tie. The last paper ribbon has fluttered down from a window to clutter the streets and settle upon unheeding hat brims. The town is quiet. Strangely, unnaturally quiet. So was Paris after the Armistice and Eden after the storm.

So is Detroit today after the wildest, maddest celebration a world's championship victory has yet known. From the moment that Leon "Goose" Goslin hit his ninth inning single to right center yesterday to score Mickey Cochrane with the run that gave the Detroit Tigers the title, the town seemingly has been beyond all human aid. As soon as Cochrane crossed the plate, with the Tigers winning the sixth and deciding game of the world series from the Chicago Cubs, 4 to 3, the effect was instantaneous, vociferous and lasting.

High Into Air

In effect, this most impulsive and ingenuous town uttered a piercing shriek, leaped high in the air—and forgot to come down.

Cochrane did a gaelic reel from the plate to the dugout. Goslin was mobbed by his own players. The crowd, better than 48,000, was only a few strides behind but too late. Frustrated by the alert gendarmerie on the steps of the dugout just as it was about to lay violent hands upon his person and, with stray pieces of uniform in their hands, speedily indicated that they were about to do him honor.

Ten thousand deep, they stopped at the edge of the concrete only because they could go no further and there like a pack of hounds baying at the moon, they stood and brayed in unison:

'We want Goose! We want Goose!"

Ultimately, they got Goose at the side entrance where he was trying to escape and literally carried him down the street in triumph. They were never to forget this day nor was Goose ever likely to forget them. But Goslin, squire of Colonial Acres at Salem, N. J., merely had touched off the spark of this conflagration. The finish came down town last night when 500,000 people glutted the sidewalks to such purpose that no one was permitted to enter or leave the Book-Cadillac hotel for some hours.

But as long as a town that goes so completely mad as Detroit over its baseball can remember this year's series, post mortems will be written. Why didn't Manager Grimm send in a pinch hitter for Jurges, if not for French? Why wasn't Goslin passed to set the stage for a double play? Clifton had fanned. A million other whys? A million explanations, a million second guesses. And, yes, why didn't the Cubs know how to make a run down play when they trapped a man off the bag? Twice in two games they missed an out via that route; experience was not a teacher, apparently.

Goose Goslin

Bill Herman

Tommy Bridges

Leading actors in the tense drama which ended when a sharp hit to the outfield scored Manager Mickey Cochrane from second base with the winning run in the sixth and final game of the world's series are shown above. They are: Goslin, veteran outfielder who delivered the hit, Bill Herman, Cub second sacker, whose home run with a mate on base, kept Chicago in the game; Tommy Bridges, who pitched masterful ball in the clinches especially in the ninth inning when Hack led off with a triple, and Manager Cochrane, whose leadership and hitting gave Detroit its first world's championship in history.

Miami will play its first conference game of the year Saturday afternoon at Oxford with Ohio Wesleyan as the opponent. On Saturday night Cincinnati will engage Denison, a non-conference foe, at Cincinnati.

In order to accustom his players to the lights under which they will play John Carroll Friday night at Cleveland, Coach Don Peden of Ohio university's Bobcats will give them one or two drills at night this week under lights at Logan, near Ohio's home city of Athens.

MICKEY COCHRANE FOR TOWN MAYOR, HURLER, SENATOR

Either Could Have Any Position And So Could Goslin; Detroit Is Crazy.

DETROIT, Oct. 8—This town has gone gaga over its first world series winner . . . Only a cold grey dawn cooled off the crowds of deliriously happy men and women which roamed the streets, singing and shouting.

If Mickey Cochrane wants to be Mayor or even Governor he has only to say the word. And if Goose Goslin wants to quit his Salem, N. J. home for a palace out here he can have it for the asking. As for little Tommy Bridges, that lad can rate a senatorship at least.

You see, it was Mickey who scored the winning run, Goslin who drove him home and Tommy whose lion-hearted pitching brought home the bacon.

"Best," Says Landis

Judge Landis told Mickey it was the best world series game he ever saw. Thus making it unanimous.

The Cubs were downcast, the Tigers jubilant in their dressing rooms. Let's listen in on them.

Mickey Cochrane: "It was a great series and I got the biggest thrill of my life when I crossed that plate in the ninth. That Bridges is about 150 pounds of guts. He was off on control until the last two innings but he made something then, believe me. After Hack opened the ninth with a triple, the next three hitters had to look at the greatest pitching I ever saw. I could hardly hold the ball."

Charley Grimm: "It was a corking series. As usual, the breaks decided it. Lady luck wasn't with us. Even so, it took a great team to beat us and I congratulate them."

Goose Goslin: "Boy, did I click on that last one! That was a $50,000 smackeroo. Looks like the old goose will buy himself some more acreage around Salem."

Larry French: "The Goose was falling away when he hit that slow curve. The lucky stiff must have hit it with the end of his nose."

Gabby Hartnett: "Don't worry, kid, you pitched a great game."

Tommy Bridges: "I thought for a while I was going to be the goat of the series when Herman hit that fast one for a home run. I got it in there too good. But I wasn't worried when Hack hit the triple. I felt sure I could get the next three if I turned on enough heat."

The gang: "And boy, how you turned it on!"

Said Umpire George Moriarty: "I'm glad it's over. The boys sure gave me quite a sleigh ride during the series. And the fans blistered my ears."

BUCKEYES PREPARE FOR DRAKE JOUST

COLUMBUS, Oct. 8—Having met one Wildcat, the University of Kentucky, the Ohio State football team started working Monday on plans to meet another invasion from the same family. This time the Cats will come from the west instead of the south.

Next Saturday afternoon the Wildcats from Drake university will appear in the stadium, the last test for the Buckeyes before they start on the conference schedule.

Drake, with a light but exceedingly tricky team, may give the Bucks much more of a battle than is predicted by the experts. Ohio State scouts who have watched the Iowans say that Drake this season is playing a wide open game of football, heaving forward and lateral passes with reckless abandon.

Coach Schmidt plans a hard workout for his team next week in an effort to iron out many rough spots that were obvious in the Kentucky encounter. Schmidt has now seen his squad under fire and plans to start immediately to rectify many errors of commission and omission.

Athletic authorities at Ohio State have decided to make next Saturday Boy Scout day and any Scout in the state will be admitted free to the stadium upon the presentation of his registration card at the North entrance. It is estimated that close to 6,000 youngsters will be present.

GRIMM IS CERTAIN LITTLE DAUGHTER IS ONE OF FAMILY

Mae Gene, hearing Charlie's voice over the radio after the game, telephoned him from St. Louis.

'Hello, honey girl," Grimm told his greatest admirer.

Mae Gene interrupted:

"Don't you cry now daddy."

The strong man who kept his chin up in the club house after the defeat, didn't but his eyes were moist.

"What else did she say?" a reporter asked.

"She told me she didn't like that man Moriarty," Grimm yelled from his cab. "You can tell she's a Grimm alright."

WHAT ARE THEY? JACK SALMON OR COMMON SHINERS

Local fisherman need a fish specialist to get them straightened out.

Last week while fishing near the mouth of Darby, Tom Brannon and Joe Grant caught three fish they called jack salmon.

Clarence Francis, game protector for Franklin and Pickaway counties, says they are not jack salmon but are a fish commonly known as moon-eyed shiners. Other local fisherman say the fishes in question belong to the wall-eyed pike family.

Anyway, the fish are light in color, round in body and have a fine set of teeth that are [illegible] minnows.

Old timers say jack Salmon were caught in the Scioto river years ago when nets were used near the State dam. They believe pollution of the river many have taken the fish in to the streams.

Shiners, wall eyes or salmon, or their first cousins, the fish are reported good eating and full of meat.

JOE WILLIAMS MAY START AT HEEKIN'S JOB

COLUMBUS, Oct. 8— Coach Francis Schmidt lost little time in getting his Ohio State football squad back to hard work after the opening game against Kentucky here in which numerous Buck flaws could be noticed.

The Buckeye linemen were given individual instructions while the Ohio backfield men rehearsed signals.

HORSE TRADING INTEREST HIGH

COLUMBUS, Oct. 8— Interest in breeding horses, on the decline in Ohio since 1921, has returned with the advent of new record prices for draft animals, and horse trading deals are the talk of the state in farm circles.

Ohio breeders are selling their stock to breeders in all parts of the United States and Canada. Ralph Humes of Delaware recently sold six head to a breeder in Colorado, and a two-year old Percheron stallion for $3500. William B. Murray of Wellington sold a grand champion at half a dozen shows this summer at a record price, and J. K. Speller & Son of Bloomville sent horses into the south and into Canada recently.

These are just a few of the sales. That interest in horse breeding in Ohio is at a new high pitch is attested by the new horse associations that have sprung up in the last two years, and by the number of community and county colt shows being planned.

In about 20 counties breeders of horses are planning colt shows to be held this month, and within the past two years 25 county draft horse breeders' associations have been organized.

The declining birth rate of the draft horse species has been definitely checked. This year, for the first time in 15 years, it is expected that birth rate of draft horses will exceed the death rate.

Shortage of good work animals has been particularly apparent in Ohio, according to L. P. McCann, extension specialist in animal husbandry for the Ohio State university. A year ago horse dealers spent $2,500,000 for horses brought into the state, and in 1933, when prices were much lower, they spent nearly $2,000,000 for horses from states to the west of Ohio, he says.

It will be at least two years until the birth rate increase may be expected to affect the supply of animals available for use.

Buyers, according to McCann, now want better horses. Two years ago they wanted cheap horses. Good purebred stallions are most in demand. Results of a survey in 22 states disclose that more mongrel and scrub stallions are being used than ever before, owing to the shortage of good purebreds.

ASK AID FOR OSU

CLEVELAND — Cuyahoga-co members of the legislature were asked by Cleveland graduates of Ohio State university to provide sufficient funds for the operation of the school, handicapped by a budget veto of Governor Davey. The alumni members warned that some members of the faculty may resign unless they can receive adequate salaries.

WHEAT PLAN AIDS DEALERS, FARMERS

Both the farmer and the business man gain from the wheat adjustment program of the Agricultural Adjustment Administration. The farmer gains because his wheat has more purchasing power and the business man gains because the increased purchasing power of the farmer enables him to buy more of the things he needs.

In the time that the wheat program has been in effect, wheat farmers have been aided through their adjustment payments, but they also are better off as a result of higher prices for the wheat they sell. These improved prices for wheat are important for the farmer, because he can sell all his wheat at this price. His adjustment payments, however, are paid on his farm allotment.

The buying power of wheat in relation to the articles farmers buy indicates how much better off farmers are now than they were in 1932 when the depression was at its worst.

With wheat at a fair exchange value as it was in the pre-war period, 17 bushels of wheat would bring enough money to buy an ordinary suit of clothes. In 1932, the prices of wheat had fallen so low that it took the money from the sale of 46 bushels of wheat to buy a suit of clothes. In the first six months of 1935, the money from the sale of 20 bushels of wheat would buy a suit.

The closer wheat is to a fair exchange value, the more goods the farmer can buy. This in turn means better business both in the cities, where the farmer trades, and in the industrial centers where goods are manufactured.

The program starts at 10 a. m. and continues until 3 p. m. with lectures by D. P. Miller, Darke-co agent; Paul Gasson, poultry raiser; E. L. U., and G. S. Vickers, of the Ohio Poultry Improvement association.

The Gasson farm is one of the outstanding poultry breeding farms in the middle west.

4-H CLUB NOTE

The Ghost of "Lollypop Bay" will be presented by the Girls' Glee club and the Boys' Glee club of Jackson-twp.

This comic operetta is to be given the latter part of this month or a little later. It is written about two very prim schools, a girls' school and a boys' school. The nearness of the two schools and moonlit Lollypop Bay play important parts in the climax.

The libretto is by Charles Roos and Juanita Roos. The music is by Charles Wakefield Cadman, who composed "At Dawning" and others.

WHEAT SIGN-UP DATE EXTENDED

Because farmers were too busy with corn cutting and seeding to attend signup meetings last week for the new wheat program, the project has been extended to Oct. 26, according to an announcement Tuesday morning by F. K. Blair, county extension agent.

NATURE PRESENTS— Oldwife

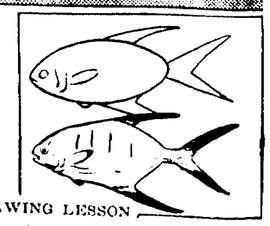
WHERE FOUND
From Virginia to Caribbean sea.

CHARACTERISTICS
One foot long, compressed body, general outline ovate, prominent fins. Color—bluish above, golden below, four narrow vertical black bars on body

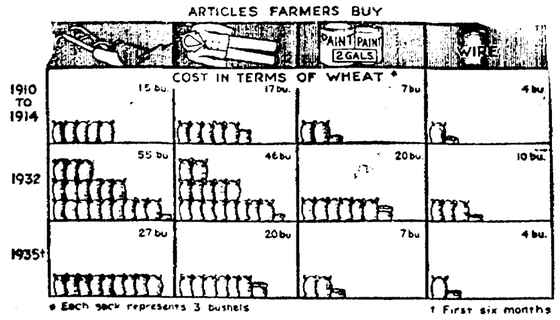


TODAY'S DRAWING LESSON

The oldwife belongs to a numerous species, about a dozen in American waters, most of which have some food value. This beautiful fellow is not highly sought for food, however. He is found at Key West and is common about Puerto Rico and other islands of the West Indies where fishermen handle him.

BUYING POWER OF WHEAT

(Not Including Benefit Payments)



THE sacks of wheat show how higher wheat prices are giving farmers more purchasing power, even without counting the adjustment payments. They show that when wheat was at a fair exchange value before the war, 15 bushels would buy a plow. In the depth of the depression in 1932 it took 55 bushels to buy the same plow, but in 1935 a farmer could buy the same plow with the money from 27 bushels of wheat. The sacks of wheat in the other squares show the purchasing power of wheat in terms of a suit of clothes, paint, and barbed wire.

C. Aultman, Greene-co school superintendent.

Aultman said today he is informed that 22 grade and high school pupils are being transported in a Clinton-co school bus to Kingsaid high school in the adjoining county, leaving only 14 to be taught in the seventh and eighth grade room at the New Burlington building. The county board of education has the matter under advisement, the transfer having allegedly been made without legal authority and against instructions of the Spring Valley township school board.

FIVE MISSING IN CHICAGO EXPLOSION

CHICAGO, Oct. 8—While rescuers combed the great mass of twisted steel, broken bricks and shattered glass for additional bodies, expert engineers were impressed as a coroner's jury today to investigate one of the worst explosions in Chicago's history.

At least six men were killed, more than 45 injured, and five missing in the terrific blast which made a shambles of the six-story, block-square plant of the Glidden Soya products company.

One of the four injured not expected to live is a 60-year-old woman, Mrs. Sarah Hickey, hit by shattered glass and flying debris in her home a half block away.

Fire Marshall Michael F. Corrigan said he believed an accumulation of gases was responsible for the explosion.

"I think some sort of experimenting was going on in there," he said. "Employes all refuse to say anything."

Ralph Wilson, a company foreman, denied an explosion of chemicals was to blame for the tragedy. "It might have been dust or steam," he said.

The explosion occurred shortly before noon yesterday, and was heard for miles. Windows were shattered blocks away, and innumerable automobiles parked in the vicinity were crushed under twisted girders and bricks.

Still, a furnace is remarkable in one way. It can smoke all the time without coughing its head off.

There aren't any great conversationalists now. Nobody could listen that long without interrupting.

No. 1

Benito Juarez Mussolini was born in 1883 at Dovia in the province of Forli. When he was 22 years old, he was a teacher at Gualtiere in the district of Reggio Emilia and, as you can see from the above picture taken at that time, already becoming bald. Complaints over his nocturnal relaxations from the schoolroom—card playing, wine drinking and dancing—caused him to lose his post. Mussolini was at the first milestone in his political career. The bootmaker-mayor who discharged him from the classroom called upon young Mussolini for a patriotic address on Garibaldi when the invited speaker failed to show up. His address was a sensation. Note the piercing eyes and the black mustache and the steely expression which later were to become important parts in his make-up.
